Will transform farmers into entrepreneurs, nurture them as new exporters : TN CM Stalin

Chennai, Sept 27 (UNI) : In what could be seen as a sweet news for the farming community, Tamil Nadu Chief Minister M K Stalin said his government would transform farmers into entrepreneurs and nurture them as new exporters. Inaugurating the Agri-Business Festival and conference at the sprawling Chennai Trade Centre here, he said transforming farmers into entrepreneurs and nurturing them as new exporters is the purpose of this festival and urged all the farmers to make full use of it. Noting that this Agri-Business Festival will certainly be beneficial to farmers, students, food processors, exporters, and the general public, he appealed to everyone connected with agriculture to come together and extend encouragement. Recalling the event "Tamil Nadu Excels in Education" conducted two days back in a grand manner, which received wide appreciation., he said today's festival stands as evidence of that, as it can rightfully be called "Tamil Nadu Excels in Agriculture." He said the exhibition and seminar provide farmers with a great opportunity to directly market their agricultural produce, besides serving as a vital platform to learn about new cultivation methods and agri-business opportunities. "This initiative will open doors to both domestic and international markets, significantly boosting exports. Through business-oriented conferences and training, the entrepreneurial capacity of farmers will be enhanced", Mr Stalin added. After the formation of our Dravidian Model Government, we renamed the "Department of Agriculture" as the "Department of Agriculture and Farmers' Welfare," thereby declaring our government's true intent! Through every scheme, we are striving not only to improve agriculture but also to enhance the living standards of farmers. Pointing out Tamil Nadu is now emerging as a pioneering state in agriculture, the Chief Minister said In the past, everyone knew how the opening of the Mettur Dam for irrigation used to be for Kuruvai cultivation was delayed."But since our ruling DMK's Dravidian Model Government took charge, the dam has been opened promptly on the scheduled date (June 12)", he added. Observing that this year, paddy has been cultivated on 5.66 lakh hectares--an additional 1,28,494 acres when compared to last year, Mr Stalin said he had written to Prime Minister Narendra Modi requesting adequate fertilizer supply to Tamil Nadu and has got an assurance that action will be taken. "We are working with dedication to ensure that farmers and agriculture in Tamil Nadu do not suffer in any way", he said. Mr Stalin said thanks to the proactive steps taken by his government in the last four years, Tamil Nadu has achieved a food grain production of 456.44 lakh metric tonnes.

The former Delhi Education Minister said he has known Wangchuk personally and is familiar with his work, which he claimed is admired globally. Sisodia referenced the Bollywood film "3 Idiots," noting that a central character was inspired by Wangchuk's life and innovations in education.
"To brand such a human being a threat to the country and jail him under laws meant for severe criminals is deeply shameful," Sisodia remarked during a press release.
He argued that Wangchuk's arrest, for raising concerns about Ladakh, was wrong.

Cong condemns govt's handling of Ladakh crisis, slams arrest of Sonam Wangchuk under NSA

New Delhi, Sept 27 (UNI) :The Indian National Congress today condemned the government's handling of the situation in Ladakh and the arrest of climate activist Sonam Wangchuk under the National Security Act.
In a post on X, Congress president Mallikarjun Kharge accused the BJP of betraying the people of Ladakh by failing to deliver on its promise to grant the region Sixth Schedule status under the Constitution, which would have provided special protections and autonomy.
He said, "The Indian National Congress strongly condemns the pathetic handling of the situation in Ladakh by the Government & subsequent arrest of Sonam Wangchuk under the draconian National Security Act (NSA) and subsequently sent to Jodhpur by special flight late last night.This move was made so secretly that even people of Sun City Jodhpur came to know about it Saturday morning only. Wangchuk is accused of "inciting violence" during the demonstrations on Wednesday.In a statement back home in Leh - Ladakh, the authorities said that it was important to prevent Wangchuk from further acting in a provocative manner (making speeches). To restore normalcy in the peace loving town of Leh, it deemed it necessary to shift him from here (Leh).

However, former Rajasthan Chief Minister Ashok Gehlot was not convinced with the explanation and held that it was a case of mishandling of the situation at the level of the Centre.In brief chat with the media in Udaipur, Gehlot said "I am unable to understand what the hell broke loose there suddenly that the authorities were forced to shift him to the Jodhpur Jail."

"Is he (Wangchuck) a dreaded terrorist? No he is not; but he is an activist used to raising local issues. Earlier, he remained a staunch supporter of Prime Minister Modi, so what might have gone wrong, why did the situation for promulgation of NSA arise? "I believe that this government has been mishandling the situation," he added.

Indians shine at Asia Pacific Rally, Achintya wins gold in men's, Silver for Tarushi Vikram in women’s Chennai, Sept 27 (UNI) : Indian drivers hogged the limelight with New Delhi’s Achintya Mehrotra winning a gold medal, while Tarushi Vikram from Chikmagalur marked her international debut with a silver medal finish in the Asian Auto Gymkhana Championship which was run concurrently with the FIA Asia-Pacific

M o t o r s p o r t Championship 2025 at the Bandaragama sports complex in Sri Lanka today.

The 35-year-old Mehrotra came out on top in a very strong field and after surviving a shootout that was ordered on a technicality besides a two-second penalty for knocking down a cone.

Eventually, he pipped Kyrgystan’s Vedenev Alexey by two-tenth of a second in a tense finish.

“I had done a 1:10 for the circuit in the previous outing but improved to 1:05 in the shootout. However, I knocked a cone down in the process and I knew I would receive a two-second penalty. I didn’t ease off and focused on maintaining my pace and flow. Eventually, it helped me beat Vedenev by a narrow margin”, Mehrotr said.

"Absolutely thrilled to win a gold medal," said Mehrotra whose compatriot Prateek Dalal from Bahadurgarh (Haryana) finished 13th.

In the women’s section, 21-year-old Tarushi Vikram maintained her composure despite early struggles to finish second for her maiden medal in international competition.

“This is my first international Gymkhana event. I just took some time to get used to the track conditions and the car, since it's a stock automatic Hyundai i10. This Silver medal means everything to me and holding the Indian flag on the podium made me feel proud,” Tarushi said.

The APMC segment of the Gymkhana event will be held tomorrow with Mehrotra and Tarushi Vikram in the running for medals.

Indians also fared well in the Karting Sprint event with consistent performances in all three classes--Cadet, Junior and Senior--going into Sunday’s Pre-Final and Finals. Mumbai’s Kiaan Shah was impressive in winning Heat 1 while the three Indian entries in Cadet class, 12-year-old Rehan Khan Rasheed (Chennai), eight-year-old Arshi Gupta (Faridabad) and B Rayan Gouda (Bengaluru), also 12 years, with top-10 finishes in all the sessions.

In the Senior class, Aarav Dewan (Gurugram), Thomas Jacob George (Kottayam) and Akshat Misra (Bengaluru) delivered impressive performances to promise a strong finish on Sunday. “It is heartening to see our youngsters faring well in the karting sprint with top-10 finishes. It bodes well for India’s medal tally tomorrow,” Prabha Shankar, Karting Team Manager, said.

Former National Rally champion Chetan Shivram (Bengaluru) was the top Indian performer in the Autocross (Crosscar) as he finished third Overall to qualify for the round of 16 while compatriot, Phillippos Matthai (New Delhi) was fifth and the qualification of Pragathi Gowda (Bengaluru) is still to be finalised.E-Sports: India’s lone entrant in the Assetto Corsa category, Sahil Khanna from Gurugram, put up a good fight but failed to make it to the final round.

DMK hand in glove with BJP, voting for DMK means voting for BJP, says Vijay

Chennai, Sept 27 (UNI) Positioning himself as the secular and pro-people alternative, actor-turned-neta and Tamilaga Vettri Kazhagam (TVK) president Vijay on Saturday targeted both the DMK and the BJP, warning the electorate that voting for the DMK would effectively be a vote cast in favour of the BJP. “We will never ever align with the fascist BJP, unlike the DMK family, which is hand in glove with the saffron party while putting up a public posturing of opposing it. They have an underground dealing with the BJP. Beware of this; people should think before exercising their franchise. For, voting for the DMK is voting for the BJP,” he said, addressing a rally at Namakkal town, 368 km southwest of Chennai.

Resuming his public outreach, he did not spare the principal opposition, AIADMK, either.

“Forgetting late Jayalalthaa’s words and straying away from her path, the AIADMK has formed an incompatible tie-up with the BJP, and the alliance does not have the trust of the people. We won’t be like them,” he said, and asked, “What good has the BJP done for Tamil Nadu? Have they abolished NEET? Have they released the funds withheld for Tamil Nadu’s education sector?” “I am not raising these questions, but the true supporters and cadre of AIADMK founder MGR (matinee icon and late Chief Minister MG Ramachandran),” he added, to lure the AIADMK support base.

Turning his ire on the ruling DMK, Vijay referred to the sensational kidney theft allegedly involving a hospital run by a DMK legislator and said the illegal kidney racket targeted poor women working in power looms.

“U s u r i o u s moneylending is connected to this, as the poor women caught in the trap are forced to sell their kidneys. The successive state governments, the present and the previous ones, have failed to uplift their economic conditions. They have kept them languishing in poverty,” he reasoned.

Then, listing the unkept poll promises of the Stalin government, Vijay asked, “Have you built the memorial manimantap for P. Subbaroyan, late Chief Minister of the erstwhile Madras Presidency (which comprised present-day Kerala, Andhra Pradesh, Karnataka, and parts of Odisha), who was instrumental in bringing proportional representation in education and government services through GO 1071 in 1927? Have you established cold storage for eggs in this district, known for egg production, and a research centre for protecting eggs from viral and bacterial infection? Have you established foodgrain yards and purchased copra for producing coconut oil for sale through ration shops?” He also reminded government servants, teachers, and transport employees about the DMK government not keeping its word on reverting to the old pension scheme. “Unlike the DMK, we won’t give false promises. We will promise what is necessary and provide it. Wherever I go in my campaign, people demand proper roads, schools with infrastructure, hospitals with doctors, and safe drinking water—this is what everyone requires, which is yet to be fulfilled. Critics accuse me of not saying anything new. Am I expected to hurl promises that CM sir dishes out? Am I expected to promise an IT park on Mars, a footpath to the USA, build a castle in the air, and fly aeroplanes from houses?”

Emboldened by the massive turnout in all his rallies, Vijay reiterated that the electoral fight in 2026 is between the TVK and the DMK, which is engaging in a loot while wearing the mask of ideology.

“TVK vs DMK” was the resounding response of the crowd when he asked who the poll battle is between. “Even I thought otherwise. Now, with confidence, I am saying we will accomplish it. We will see to it. The next government is by the TVK. Victory is certain.”

Every minute, 8 die of heart disease in SE Asia, WHO cites weak enforcement, regulatory gaps

In South-East Asia, eight people die every minute due to cardiovascular diseases (CVDs), Dr Catharina Boehme, officer-in-charge of WHO South-East Asia, today said, blaming the toll on commercial interests, inadequate fiscal and regulatory frameworks, weak enforcement, and poor oversight of unhealthy product marketing.

Ahead of World Heart Day on September 29, Dr Boehme pointed out, “CVDs remain the leading cause of death in the region, with nearly half of these fatalities occurring prematurely, in individuals below 70 years of age.”

Highlighting the progress made under the SEAHEARTS resolution, a regional commitment adopted two years ago to accelerate prevention and control of cardiovascular diseases, she said, “So far, the outcomes have been encouraging, but significant challenges remain.”

“By June 2025, over 90 million patients with hypertension and diabetes have received protocol-based care at public health facilities” noted Dr Boehme.

"Legislative bans on harmful trans fats now protect more than 1.7 billion people, and tobacco control measures have reached over 103 million individuals through at least three WHO MPOWER strategies,” said Dr Boehme, citing political will and multi-sectoral coordination as key drivers of this success.

However, significant challenges persist. “Commercial interests, inadequate fiscal and regulatory frameworks, weak enforcement, and poor oversight of unhealthy product marketing hinder progress,” Dr. Boehme noted.

Public awareness of cardiovascular risk factors remains low, and many Member States lack sufficient laboratory capacity and enforcement mechanisms to regulate sodium in foods, test tobacco products, or monitor trans-fat levels.

Hypertension, diabetes, tobacco use, alcohol consumption, unhealthy diets high in salt and fats, and physical inactivity remain the primary drivers of this epidemic.

“Alarmingly, 85% of those living with hypertension and diabetes in the region have their conditions poorly controlled,” Dr. Boehme warned, highlighting how rapid urbanisation and ageing populations are further straining already overstretched health systems.

The delivery of quality care is further hampered by limited funding for non-communicable diseases, shortages of trained healthcare workers, and insufficient access to essential diagnostics and medicines at the primary care level.

Dr Boehme emphasised that turning the tide will require collective responsibility: “Governments, civil society, academia, the private sector, and communities must unite — no single entity can combat cardiovascular diseases alone.”

The SEAHEARTS resolution aims to bring 100 million people with hypertension and/or diabetes under protocol-based management by 2025, while intensifying efforts to reduce tobacco use, salt intake, and eliminate industrially produced trans-fatty acids from food supplies.

Dr Boehme urged individuals to take preventive measures: “Quitting tobacco, reducing salt intake, engaging in daily physical activity, and managing stress are vital steps towards a healthy heart.”

For policymakers, she called for urgent action: “Salt reduction, enforcement of industrial trans-fat bans, and comprehensive tobacco control laws must be top priorities.”

Primary healthcare, she said, must remain the cornerstone of heart health. “This requires strengthening urban health systems, expanding access to protocol-based medicines and technologies, and involving the private sector in coordinated care,” said Dr Boehme."Enhanced health information systems can support patient tracking, improve treatment adherence, and monitor outcomes. Training health workers and streamlining referral pathways are essential to saving countless lives,” Dr Boehme said.

(Standard Post Bureau)

Surat, known as the diamond and textile hub of India, is witnessing rapid growth in passenger and freight movement. To meet the future demands of Gujarat, Indian Railways is undertaking comprehensive measures. These include the redevelopment of Railway Stations in Surat & Udhna and introduction of new passenger and freight trains.

Amrit Bharat Express between Odisha and Gujarat

Today, Hon'ble Prime Minister Sh. Narendra Modi flagged off the Amrit Bharat Express between Brahmapur (Odisha) and Udhna (Gujarat). It is a new generation train designed for affordable, safe, and long-distance travel.

Features of Amrit Bharat Express:

Modern ergonomic seating with improved design

Fully connected coaches for seamless movement

Twin-engine configuration ensuring higher safety and reliability

Just as Vande Bharat has redefined travel for the middle class, Amrit Bharat Express will provide similar facilities at an affordable fare. The rail service flagged off today will be available at fare of Rs 495 (General class) and Rs 795 (Non-AC sleeper class) per journey.

The train will cover a distance of over 1700 km spread over 22 districts of 5 states (Gujarat, Maharashtra, Chhattisgarh, Andhra Pradesh and Odisha).

Through this new connectivity, entrepreneurs and businesspeople including the youth will be able to find more avenues in textile, diamonds, and related sectors. This train will also benefit pilgrims going to Maa Tara Tarini Shaktipeeth.

Station redevelopment work in Gujarat

The stations of Gujarat are being developed as part of the Master Development plan, keeping the next 50 years in sight. Indian Railways is undertaking comprehensive redevelopment of Railway Stations such as Udhna, Surat, Bilimora, Sachin etc.

The Union Minister

took stock of redevelopment work of Udhna Station today. He mentioned that the station is being designed on modern lines. Special emphasis is laid on expanding the capacity of platforms and pit lines.

Earlier in the day, the Union Minister also visited the Surat High Speed Rail Station to review the construction work. Work between Surat-Billimora is progressing rapidly. The civil work of the station is completed with the finishing and utility work currently underway.

During today's inspection, the minister informed us that modern and innovative technology is being used in this project.

The work on tracks has been progressing at remarkable speed. He mentioned that the first turnout has been successfully installed at Surat station. A turnout is the critical junction of railway tracks. This feature will enable flexibility and smooth operation of high-speed trains.

The tracks also features roller bearings, allowing their smoother and safer movement while the bullet train runs on it at high speed. Additionally, sleepers on the track are made using composite material instead of concrete. This will ensure higher durability, reduced maintenance, and better performance at high speeds.

To further improve passenger comfort and reduce the noise in the environment, a vibration absorption mechanism in the form of dampers has been introduced. These will absorb the noise and shock. The Union Minister mentioned that with this project we will be able to reach Mumbai from Surat in one hour.

The station redevelopment and track laying is progressing at a steady pace. The High-Speed Rail project will eventually transform connectivity and boost economic activity. The entire stretch of Ahmedabad and Mumbai will become one economic corridor. The project will also set new benchmarks in railway technology and passenger experience.

Hidden Salt Driving Hypertension Crisis in Cuttack

(Standard Post Bureau)

As World Heart Day approaches, leading doctors in Cuttack are urging citizens to look beyond visible salt on the dining table and confront a far more dangerous threat—the hidden sodium present in packaged, processed, and street foods. With hypertension emerging as one of the biggest contributors to heart disease in India, experts say that ignoring this invisible culprit could prove deadly for Cuttack's residents.

Dr. Omm Prakash Nayak, MD, DM (Cardiology), SCB Medical College &

Hospital, explained that while many households consciously cut down on the salt sprinkled in home-cooked meals, the real danger comes from sodium consumed unknowingly. This includes bakery bread, instant noodles, chips, sauces, pickles, chutneys, papads, aerated drinks, and even “health foods” like flavored oats or packaged juices.

“The danger is not the salt you see, but the salt you don't,” said Dr. Nayak. “In Cuttack, I see patients who avoid adding extra salt at home, yet their daily diet includes namkeen, bhujia, fast-food items, and bakery snacks that are loaded with hidden sodium.

The average adult is easily consuming nearly double the recommended 5 grams of salt per day without realizing it.

This silent overload gradually stiffens arteries, damages the kidneys, and increases the risk of heart attacks and strokes. By the time symptoms appear, hypertension is already well established. People must understand that salt is not just what comes out of the shaker—it hides in almost everything we eat outside.”

Cuttack's lifestyle and food culture make the problem even more acute.

Street food such as dahibara-aloo dum, gupchup, fried pakoras, and spicy rolls are household favorites, but they carry heavy doses of salt and refined oil.

Festive seasons bring platters filled with salted savories and deep-fried snacks that further push daily sodium intake beyond safe limits. Add to this the rising trend of eating out at restaurants and ordering packaged fast food, and the city faces a hidden epidemic.

Dr. Nayak emphasized that cutting hidden salt requires both individual and community action. “We must return to basics—fresh fruits, vegetables, pulses, and millets with measured salt in cooking. Families should read food labels carefully and choose low-sodium options. Schools and local community groups can create awareness campaigns, while street vendors and food outlets must also be encouraged to provide healthier, low-salt alternatives. This is not about giving up taste; it is about safeguarding lives. A simple decision at the kitchen or market can prevent years of suffering from hypertension and heart failure.”

With nearly one in three Indian adults suffering from high blood pressure, the impact is severe. Untreated hypertension is a leading cause of premature heart disease, kidney failure, and strokes. In Odisha, where traditional diets are rapidly being replaced by urban food habits, doctors warn that unless people become alert to hidden salt, the burden of cardiovascular disease will only worsen.

World Heart Day 2025 comes with a timely reminder: prevention starts not in the hospital but in daily food choices. For Cuttack, the message is clear—cutting hidden sodium today is the only way to protect tomorrow's heart health.

Myanmar Investment Commission approves 19 projects

Yangon, Sept. 27 (UNI) : The Myanmar Investment Commission (MIC) approved four foreign investment projects and 15 local ventures on Friday, state-owned daily The Global New Light of Myanmar reported on Saturday. These projects cover various sectors, including industry, services, electricity, transport, communications, as well as breeding and marine industries, and are expected to create 4,446 jobs for locals, the report said.The total investment is valued at 109.63 million U.S. dollars and over 417.54 billion kyats (about 198.82 million U.S. dollars), it said.

As of the end of August 2025, among the 53 investing countries, Singapore, China, and Thailand are the leading countries with the largest foreign investments in the country, it added.

The MIC oversees and approves investment project proposals from locals and overseas, and serves existing investors under the Myanmar Investment Law, the report said.

EU fanning 'drone wall' hysteria to justify military spending: Russia

Moscow, Sept 27 (UNI) : Hysteria surrounding the alleged drone incursion into the European union and its "drone wall" project is being inflated to justify increased military spending, Vladislav Maslennikov, chief of the Department of European Issues at the Russian Foreign Ministry, told Sputnik.

"It is obvious that 'hysteria' fanned by the EU members around the incursion of drones into the EU territory and the announcement of defense projects with big names pursue only one goal, which is to justify to the public why they are increasing military spending in Europe at the expense of socio-economic projects and the decreasing standard of living," he said.

Maslennikov said there was no clarity regarding the length of the proposed "drone wall," and warned that personal ambitions and political games of the ruling elites in the EU would ultimately lead "not to a decrease, but to an increase in military and political tensions in our continent."

US reveals 21-point proposal for ending Israel-Hamas war in Gaza, calls for demilitarisation, future Palestinian state

New York, Sept 27 (UNI) : The US has revealed its proposal for ending the Israel-Hamas war in Gaza, which quaintly enough sees Washington explicitly encouraging Palestinians to remain in the war-ravaged Strip, outlining a potential pathway for the establishment of a potential future Palestinian state, according to a copy obtained by The Times of Israel.

The 21-point document shared by the US with a handful of Arab and Muslim countries earlier this week on the UN General Assembly sidelines combines long-standing Israeli demands with new concessions to Palestinians.

The plan calls for the release of all hostages, the removal of Hamas from power, demilitarisation of Gaza, and deradicalisation of the enclave. Simultaneously, it also envisions post-war reconstruction, reform of the Palestinian Authority, and the creation of a "political horizon" for peaceful coexistence.

The exact sequencing for these steps isn't specified, but it appears that they are intended to come into effect in parallel with the ending of the war.

The plan marks a major shift for Washington, given that back in February, Trump had given the bizarre proposal of a US military takeover of the Strip to aid in the relocation of its two million population to another area.His statement had emboldened the far-right figures in Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu's coalition who have openly supported "voluntary migration."

By contrast, the new proposal envisions a potential pathway to a future Palestinian state, after Gaza's redevelopment has advanced and the Palestinian Authority's reform has been completed, also appears to be a major departure from the Trump administration's policy to date, given that it has avoided expressing backing for a two-state solution.

The plan- largely crafted by US special envoy Steve Witkoff — and poised to be fine-tuned in the coming days — reportedly would even see the US establishing a dialogue with Israel and the Palestinians to agree on a "political horizon" for "peaceful coexistence."

However, its provisions also support Jerusalem's key demands for ending its war, with many calling its adoption dubious, owing to Hamas' likely rejection, particularly as the terror group has refused any calls for disarming.

The Israeli premier has been fiercely against any establishment of a Palestinian state, and echoed his animosity to such a suggestion during the UNGA session on Friday, where he stated "Giving the Palestinians a state one mile from Jerusalem after October 7th is like giving Al-Qaeda a state one mile from New York City after September 11th.

"This is sheer madness. It's insane, and we won't do it... Israel will not allow you to shove a terror state down our throats."

President Trump has however expressed optimism about his chances for success, telling reporters earlier in the day that a deal may already be in place, before posting on Truth Social that "intense negotiations have been going on for four days and will continue for as long as necessary to get a successfully completed agreement."

The plan is yet to be presented to the Hamas leadership, and being light on details, will require subsequent negotiations, even if the sides agree to the plan.

Prevalence of geopolitics distracts UNGA from nuclear agenda

Moscow, Sept 27 (UNI/SPUTNIK) : The prevalence of geopolitical issues at the United Nations General Assembly distracts the gathering from "moving the world together" in terms of nuclear energy development, World Nuclear Association Director General Dr. Sama Bilbao y Leon told RIA Novosti.

"I have been following the General Assembly, and I was in New York on Monday and Tuesday. It has been, unfortunately, not as promising as we would like. I think we have so many conflicts, so many tensions in the world, that we are really distracted from working together and moving the world together and providing for, well, the 800 million people in the world with no access to electricity," Bilbao y Leon said on the sidelines of the World Atomic Week forum in Moscow when asked whether the UNGA was doing enough to promote safe nuclear energy.

The director general added that she does not expect nuclear energy to be a "big topic at this General Assembly, unfortunately."

"We have other problems right now. I think that [International Atomic Energy Agency] Director General [Rafael] Grossi clearly is doing [Rafael] fabulous job making sure that nuclear energy is considered within the United Nations Global Agenda. Unfortunately, well, as I said, we have many other problems," she also said.The 80th anniversary session of the UN General Assembly opened on September 9. As per tradition, it includes the high-level week. General debates are taking place from September 23-27 and on September 29. Discussions during the assembly largely circle around the war in the Middle East, the Ukraine conflict, and the situation around the Iranian nuclear program.

UAE FM presses for Gaza ceasefire

Abu Dhabi/Jerusalem, Sept 27 (UNI) : UAE Foreign Minister Abdullah bin Zayed met with Israeli PM Benjamin Netanyahu on the sidelines of the UN General Assembly, and stressed on the need for an urgent ceasefire in Gaza and firmly rejected Jerusalem's potential annexation of Palestinian territories.According to statements by the UAE Foreign Ministry, the top Emirati official also warned that the UAE's normalisation agreement with Israel could be harmed, if Tel Aviv moved ahead with the initiative, as per Times of Israel.

According to the UAE Foreign Ministry, the meeting, also attended by Ambassador to Israel Mohammed Mahmoud Al-Khaja and special envoy Lana Nusseibeh, focused heavily on the humanitarian toll of the conflict.

"The foreign minister stressed the urgent need to end the war in Gaza, reach a permanent and sustainable ceasefire, prevent further loss of life,

Excessive force by Nepal Police hastened Oli govt's fall; 13,182 cases of firing took place on Gen Z protesters Kathmandu, Sept 27 (UNI) : Official records from Nepal Police reveal that excessive force was used by its personnel to suppress the nationwide Gen Z protests of September 8-9, which ultimately precipitated the fall of the Oli government. A preliminary police report found that over 13,182 separate instances of firing were reported during the two days of unrest.

The report shows that 2,642 rounds of live ammunition were used, alongside 1,884 rubber bullets, 2,377 warning shots and 6,279 tear gas shells.

Much of the firing involved lethal weapons, including INSAS rifles, self-loading rifles (SLR) and pistols. Post-mortem reports at Tribhuvan University Teaching Hospital indicated that high-velocity bullets were responsible for most deaths, according to Kathmandu Post.

The heaviest use of force was recorded in the Kathmandu Valley, where police discharged 1,329 live bullets, 1,420 rubber bullets, 1,046 warning shots and over 3,000 tear gas shells.

In total, the Valley alone witnessed 6,891 firings. Other hotspots included Madhesh province with 1,921 instances, Koshi with 1,568, Karnali with 932, Sudurpaschim with 763, Lumbini with 619, Gandaki with 306, and other Bagmati districts with 181.

"This is only a preliminary record prepared by the police. The numbers could rise," a Home Ministry official said.

Police spokesperson Binod Ghimire added that a committee led by Deputy Inspector General Deepak Regmi is still investigating the use and loss of ammunition, with records partly destroyed in an arson attack on the Valley Police Office in Ranipokhari.

Additionally, senior police officers have admitted to failures in intelligence-gathering, supporting the NHRC's claims of the government's sheer underestimation of the movement's scale.

Authorities reportedly expected only 4,000–5,000 demonstrators on Sept 8, and thus were woefully unprepared.

Initially, the Home Ministry ordered minimal deployment, with reinforcements inside Parliament.

Former Additional Inspector General Uttamraj

Subedi called the strategy flawed, stating "Declaring a prohibited area means preventing entry. Procedures that should have been completed before firing were not implemented."

Protesters -who coordinated by social media – broke through the barricades at Maitighar half past midnight and hung a 'Wake Up Nepal' banner on the Baneshwar's skywalk, and then proceeded to surrounded the Parliament's premises. Ill-prepared, police responded with live fire from Special Task Force personnel and other units.

Nineteen people were killed in Kathmandu on the first day, with further deaths in Koshi. By the second day, the death toll climbed to 75, including juveniles in correctional facilities, prisoners in Dhading and Ramechhap, 20 civilians in supermarket arson attacks, and three police officers beaten by protesters. Most fatalities were caused by bullets.

Critics have condemned the use of live fire. Former NHRC commissioner Mohna Ansari said "International crowd control principles mandate non-lethal weapons. Shooting protesters in the head is even more serious."

Post-mortems revealed most gunshots struck above the waist, despite legal provisions requiring warnings and aiming at legs if firearms are used.

The scale of the shootings was beyond expectations and alarmed Nepal's political leadership. At an emergency National Security Council meeting, then Prime Minister KP Sharma Oli said such levels of firing were unprecedented.

Security leaders have claimed that lethal force was used only after protesters breached prohibited zones, though senior advocate Satish Krishna Kharel argued against the statement and said "Targeting protesters' heads was unprofessional. I suspect it was done to provoke the situation."

Some cases of mob violence, arson, and vandalism were also noted to have been incited from within the movement's inner circle – supposedly to hasten its goal of collapsing the Oli regime – and they proceeded to add greater fuel to the already raging flames, thus triggering the unexpected scale of mass violence, though these perpetrators are unknown.

Russia has know how, expertise to build closed fuel cycle NPP: World Nuclear Association

Moscow, Sept 27 (UNI) : Russia has the experience, know-how, and expertise to build a nuclear power plant with a closed fuel cycle, World Nuclear Association Director General Dr. Sama Bilbao y Leon told RIA Novosti.

On Thursday, Russian President Vladimir Putin announced that Russia would be constructing the world's first nuclear power system with a closed fuel cycle in the Tomsk Region, with the launch date set for 2030.

"That is definitely something that [Russian state nuclear corporation] Rosatom has been planning on doing. And frankly, I think we know that there is the experience already here. We already have the fast reactors that have been operating for 40-50 years. So, I think that Russia has the know-how and the expertise to do something like that," Bilbao y Leon said on the sidelines of the World Atomic Week forum in Moscow when commenting on the announcement.

Bilbao y Leon also highlighted Rosatom's "fabulous track record" in cooperating with other countries in advancing their nuclear energy capabilities and noted that there are other examples of nuclear development cooperation, such as South Korea and the United Arab Emirates, as well as China and Pakistan."I think the beauty of the nuclear industry [is in] how we really work together, how this is a team effort, and how countries like to collaborate and learn from each other," the director general added.

Speaking of the global production of nuclear fuel, Bilbao y Leon noted that

EU plan to stop Russian energy imports by 2027 to hit Europeans: Russian diplomat

Moscow, Sept 27 (UNI/Sputnik) : The European Commission's plan to abandon Russian energy imports by 2027 looks unfeasible and would affect the standard of living in Europe, Vladislav Maslennikov, chief of the Department of European Issues at the Russian Foreign Ministry, told Sputnik.

"The intention to abandon Russian energy imports by 2027, which was announced by the European Commission president following her meeting with US President Donald Trump on the sidelines of the UN General Assembly in New York on September 23, will ultimately affect the standard of living of people in EU countries," Maslennikov said.

On September 11, European Commissioner for Energy and Housing Dan Jorgensen announced the EU's commitment to a plan to stop Russian gas imports by 2028. European Commission President von der Leyen had to correct Jorgensen to avoid angering Trump, the Russian diplomat said.

"The EU is ready to use any means, from anti-Russian demagoguery to methods that contradict established norms and rules of conduct, including in trade and the economy. Reality usually turns out to be more interesting than plans. It is already obvious to experts that the pace of the 'green' transition announced by Brussels is unrealistic," said Maslennikov.

"It is not clear how feasible the plans for an 'early' withdrawal from Russian energy imports are, not in the least because they do not take into account the interests of several EU member states," Maslennikov said.

the majority of countries in the world "are actually doing a lot of effort" in exploration and mining of uranium."I think that there are lots of opportunities in Central Asia. I think there are lots of opportunities in Africa. There are many countries in Africa that have enormous resources. We just really need to do the investment in finding it and extracting it," she said.During the Thursday announcement, Putin also said that the planned construction of the closed fuel cycle reactor is, in the full sense, a revolutionary development of Russian scientists and engineers. Such a mechanism will make it possible in the future to almost completely solve the problems of accumulation of radioactive waste and, most importantly, to remove the issue of uranium security, according to the president.

5 email etiquettes to avoid Embarrassment

This is the age of email communication. Although we have quick access messengers for instant chats, there are instances where you have to send an email.

However, there are no set rules for the same. Remember your language classes in school where you were taught the important components of a letter? Yes, we did learn about letter writing skills - date, salutation, subject, body of the letter and sign off being the not to be missed components. Fortunately or unfortunately, this is missing from the emails that we exchange on a daily basis. Even though we use emails for office communication, we more often than not end up using an informal tone which at time might land you in trouble.

Here are a few things to keep in mind when you write an email

First things first: Do not use short forms. Agreed, we shorten words to fit the character length on our phones and also save time. However, this is a strict no-no in office communication. For all you know, the email may be read by your super boss or CEO of the company. Using short forms might lead him to think you are not serious about your work. The bottom line — Be formal where required!

Know the addressee: get your facts right. Know who you are writing to. Also, find out his/her designation and follow protocol. For instance, even people in the top posts are addressed by their names in a media company which may not be the case in other corporate organisations. So it's best not to flout rules. If a person has to be addressed as sir/madam use the same.

Spell out the subject: Make a clear mention on the contents of the mail in your subject. For instance, if the mail pertains to a delayed project, mention the same in the subject line so the recipient knows what to expect. A subject line is what grabs attention of the recipient who receives hundreds of mails a day on an average.

Be crisp: Be clear on what you want to convey. In the age of speed news, people do not have an entire day to read mails. Hence, no history required, just get straight to the point. Remember the attention span is limited and there are too many diversions. Hence the reader might lose interest and miss the actual point intended in the mail after reading your prelude. Keep the message brief, yet effective. MAKE sure you mention the important information in the first few lines itself.

Proofread your mail: Last, but not the least it's very important to reread what you have written so as to avoid typos and goof-ups to avert disasters. To err is human, but to rectify them is wise! It's better to be safe than sorry isn't it?

Is your high-flying job making you sick?

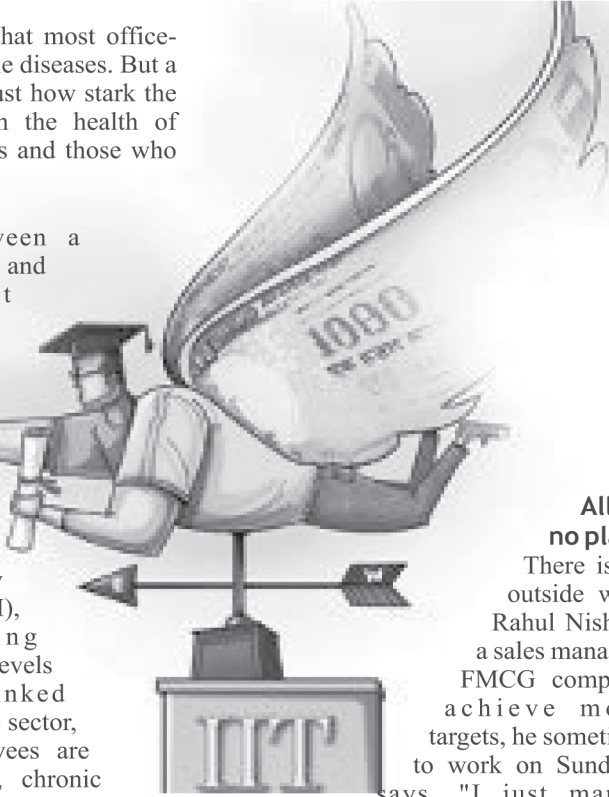

It's not breaking news that most office-goers suffer from lifestyle diseases. But a new survey highlights just how stark the differences are between the health of private sector employees and those who work in sarkari offices.

85% afflicted
The difference between a corporate professional and his government counterpart isn't in just how much salary they draw, but also in how healthy they are. According to a national survey by the Associated Chambers of Commerce and Industry of India (ASSOCHAM), "Due to demanding schedules, high stress levels and performance-linked perquisites in the private sector, nearly 85% of employees are afflicted with lifestyle, chronic diseases and acute ailments, while government employees range below 8%."

Same work profile, different work hours
IT consultant Akshay Verma, 24, deals with foreign clients, and so his timings are never fixed. He says, "Before joining this consultancy job, I had no health issues. But in the last six months, I've developed spondylitis. I sit at my workstation for more than 12, and at times, 16 hours, per day." However, Praveen Sahay, 32, who is also an IT consultant but deals with a government enterprise, says, "My client's an Indian bank, so my work life isn't hectic at all. Mine are proper sarkari office timings. I don't have to work after 6pm. After going home, I sometimes help my wife in the kitchen to make her happy."

The young and the sick
Sumit Arora, 26, a web developer, says, "I've developed carpal tunnel syndrome, which happens when the movement of the hand is limited. I sit in front of the computer all day." Pratik Kumar, 27, a chartered accountant, has developed a dry eye because of long computer hours. "I use eye drops, but the damage is done," says he.

Survey says 85% of private sector workers have lifestyle diseases, while only 8% government office-goers do.

All work, no play

There is no life outside work for Rahul Nishant, 30, a sales manager at an FMCG company. To achieve monthly targets, he sometimes has to work on Sundays. He says, "I just married a computer engineer. Sometimes, I work on Sundays, and if I'm home before 9pm, I have to make excel sheets and PPTs for a morning meeting. I hardly get any quality time to spend with my wife. It is usually at dinner that we talk. She taunts me that I shouldn't have married her, but the excel sheets and PPTs. I've also got high BP because of work tension." Kapil Deo (name changed), 35, works as an R&D manager in an automobile company. He's called to office at 1am quite often. "Once you get into a private company, they act like they own you. I often get calls at midnight to be in office because machines are not responding properly. I've become an insomniac. I don't get time to play with my kid. She waits for Sundays as that's the only day I'm available for her." But Shibani Rai, a bank PO, says, "It's not that government employees don't work. They are not overloaded. They're not understaffed, so work is distributed equally. The only time when I'm really busy is March and April. We have the closing, and after that, audits happen. So, for two months, my routine is rather busy, but otherwise, I leave for home by 7pm. If I have to meet my relatives or have to shop, I don't have to wait till Sunday like many of my friends."

Marshall Goldsmith, in his book, What Got You Here Won't Get You There, makes a pertinent point: "If you keep your mouth shut, no one can ever know how you really feel." Yet, most employees answer diplomatically or simply beat around the bush during their exit interviews. Here are a few points that employers should keep in mind while conducting exit interviews.

-THE BASICS

An exit interview is an important HR tool to assess the company's well being at various levels. Good exit interviews enable organizations to extract relevant information from exiting employee, analyze it, and subsequently, perform reformative or corrective measures for organizational growth. Elaborating on this point, Manuel D'Souza, director, HR, Serco Global Services, says, "Exit interviews are a means to understand the underlying reasons that influences an employee to leave. Employee feedback can provide insights that can be used to eliminate the recurring factors and lower the attrition rate. The positive impact of such practices can sometimes even result in retaining the concerned employee."

However, exit interviews go beyond simply gauging employee issues and attempting retention. As Lakshmi Iyer, a brand consultant with over 15 years' experience at various branding and marketing and communication agencies, says, "Exit interviews are critical since they provide an opportunity for introspection within the organization. If conducted well, they clearly bring out what the organization should and should not be proud of."

-DOING IT RIGHT

To make the most of exit interviews and ensure that they are not conducted as mere formality, organizations must begin by asking the right questions through the right people. Appropriately planned discussions are an excellent opportunity to learn about both the strengths and weaknesses of both, the manager and organization. D'Souza says, "The interviewer must try to comfort the employees and ensure them that the information they share will be confidential. It largely depends on the maturity of the person conducting the interview. If it inspires a level of comfort, then unpleasant conversations and subsequent discussions that trickle in could be sensibly handled." He adds, "The discussion pointers must include the overall work experience of an employee in the organization, reason key triggers for leaving and indicators that can make the employee stay."

How to go about conducting exit Interviews

He stresses on the fact that the interviewer must keep the discussion open and that information should be fairly presented to the management team.

-PUTTING IT IN PERSPECTIVE

While organizations must remain neutral and encourage honest responses from exiting employees, some inputs placed before the organization may be explosive in nature and, perhaps, against the management's practices. "It is important that in the face of negative feedback the organization does not get defensive and lose sight of the larger picture," shares Iyer. The hallmark of a good organization lies in its ability to accept criticism with grace and have mechanisms to assess and effectively deal with them.

Most importantly, perhaps, exit interviews reflect that the organization cares. "When employees resign, companies often steer their focus on finding apt replacements and figuring a smooth transition strategy from everyday business perspective. As a consequence, the importance of organizing a purposeful exit interview takes a backseat. Thus, not only does the organization lose an excellent opportunity to learn about its strengths and weaknesses, but also on parting on good terms," says Lasya Chand, a communications professional, who recently quit her job at a branding agency. However, she also adds that employees must insist on an exit interview and it shouldn't be the sole responsibility of the company.

In conclusion, Iyer puts it best when she says: "An exit interview is an inexpensive and effective primary research that gives solid insights into the internal culture of the organization, its strengths and weaknesses, and identifies the gaps in perception as well. And therefore, it should be taken very seriously."

J and K Cricket Association to host 3 Ranjit Trophy among 8 matches

Jammu, Sept 27 (UNI) : The Jammu and Kashmir Cricket Association (JKCA) is set to host a landmark season featuring a total of eight prestigious national matches including three Ranjit Trophy in the twin divisions.

As per the official handout, the thrilling lineup includes three Ranji Trophy (Senior Men), three CK Nayudu Trophy (U-23 Men), and two Cooch Behar Trophy (U-19 Men) matches.

In Ranji Trophy, J&K will clash against the legendary 42-time champions Mumbai, scheduled at SK Stadium Srinagar from October 15 to 18, 2025 followed by another intense Ranji Trophy face-off with Rajasthan at the same venue from October 25 to 28 and the action then shifts to JKCA Hostel Ground Jammu, where the J&K team will battle Meghalaya in the Col CK Nayudu Trophy from October 26 to 29.

Thereafter, the senior squad returns to the same ground for a Ranji Trophy match against Hyderabad from November 16 to 19.

At Jammu University Ground, the U-19 squad will showcase their talent in a thrilling Cooch Behar Trophy encounter against Mumbai from November 23 to 26 and they will then take on Baroda from December 1 to 4 continuing the cricketing fervor in the region.

The JKCA will also host two more CK Nayudu Trophy matches against Baroda and Goa at JKCA Hostel Ground Jammu, scheduled between February 6 to 9 and February 13 to 16 in 2026.

Meanwhile, the JKCA has invited sports journalists from both Jammu and Kashmir regions to apply for accreditation to cover these momentous events.

Brigadier Anil Gupta, Member Administration JKCA, emphasized, "Only journalists and cameramen accredited by the JKCA will be granted access to these exclusive venues. We also remind all media representatives that no video recording or live broadcasting of the matches is permitted, in respect of the exclusive media rights held by the BCCI. Mithun Manhas set to become BCCI President on Sunday, J&K Cricket Assn terms it historic milestone Jammu, Sept 27 (UNI) : The Jammu and Kashmir Cricket Association (JKCA) termed it a historic milestone as son of the soil, Mithun Manhas, is all set to become President of the Board of Control for Cricket in India (BCCI), effective from tomorrow.

An official communique issued by the J&K Cricket Association, stated that this monumental achievement has filled the people of Jammu and Kashmir with immense pride, marking a significant moment for the region's sporting legacy.

Manhas, a young and dynamic sports personality has an illustrious career adorned with numerous records and firsts. Under his visionary leadership, JKCA has scaled new heights, elevating the standard of cricket in the region. His efforts have not only enhanced J&K's reputation in the cricketing world but also provided a platform for aspiring cricketers from the region to shine on national and international stages.

However, it read that the joyous occasion was briefly overshadowed by a frivolous writ petition filed in the Jammu Wing of J&K & Ladakh High Court by Sudershan Mehta and a few disgruntled individuals seeking to stay Manhas' election on baseless and presumptuous grounds.

The Court, in its wisdom, dismissed the petition today, questioning Mehta's locus standi as well as the territorial jurisdiction of the Court to entertain the writ. The dismissal of this baseless petition reaffirms the unwavering support for Manhas and his transformative contributions to cricket in J&K and beyond, it read and said, "the people of Jammu and Kashmir stand united in celebrating this proud moment, undeterred by the actions of a few pessimists."

Aus still favourites, but others closing in Bengaluru, Sept 27 (UNI) : Australia's women's side has dominated the ODI format for decades, but if you've been watching closely, there are cracks beginning to show. Sure, they still win more often than not, but the gap between them and the chasing pack isn't what it once was.

In their recent series against India, Australia were put under pressure more than once. India had their chances but couldn't quite close it out—something we've seen before. That's been the story for most teams against Australia: close, but not close enough.

History says they'll start the World Cup as favourites. Seven ODI titles and six in T20s tells you they know how to win the big tournaments. But winning streaks don't last forever, and right now, the others are making up ground. England beat them in the Ashes ODIs, and India are playing with enough belief to know they

BCCI clears objections against Harbhajan, Bhat, Shukla

Bengaluru, Sept 27 (UNI) : The Board of Control for Cricket in India (BCCI) electoral officer AK Joti has dismissed objections against key nominees, including former India spinners Harbhajan Singh and Raghuram Bhat, and Rajeev Shukla, ahead of the Annual General Meeting (AGM) scheduled tomorrow.

Objections had arisen from the Punjab Cricket Association (PCA), Uttar Pradesh Cricket Association (UPCA), and Karnataka State Cricket Association (KSCA). Harbhajan Singh's nomination had been challenged over a potential conflict of interest due to his role as PCA's 'Chief Cricketing Advisor,' but the position was clarified to be honorary, leading to the dismissal of the objection.

Similarly, objections against Shukla (UPCA) and Bhat (KSCA) were quashed, allowing Shukla to be re-elected as vice-president and Bhat to assume the role of treasurer despite allegations connected to the June 4 RCB-Chinnaswamy stampede.

Other challenges against nominees from Goa, Hyderabad, Baroda, and Arunachal Cricket Associations were also dismissed, confirming their eligibility for the AGM.

The AGM will see Mithun Manhas elected as BCCI president, with Devajit Saikia continuing as secretary and Raghuram Bhat taking over as treasurer. Two new selectors – Pragyan Ojha and RP Singh – will join the senior men's selection committee, while four new members will join the women's panel. S Sharath will chair the junior selection committee. Key agenda items include approval of secretary and treasurer reports for FY 2024-25, adoption of the FY 2025-26 budget, appointment of auditors, ombudsman, ethics officer, standing committees, and formation of the Women's Premier League Committee, along with elections for BCCI and IPL governing council representatives.

We have shed the pressure and are keen to sustain the momentum: Gagan Gowda

Chennai, Sept 27 (UNI) : When the UP Yoddhas step onto the mat, it's rarely about one player. But when Gagan Gowda is in form, the team knows it has a weapon. Eight games into Pro Kabaddi League (PKL) Season 12, Gowda has already scored 82 points, the highest for his team. But for him, personal milestones are secondary to the bigger picture. The young raider has seen games where even his Super 10s couldn't save the team from defeat, and he's determined not to let that pattern repeat itself. "Personally, I am keeping the processes the same as last year. However, when we were losing after I got Super 10s, I was not too pleased with that because the environment wasn't as vibrant back then. Even if I get fewer points, the topmost objective is to keep winning," Gowda explained. A certain phase in this season wasn't smooth. Four losses in as many matches had the Yoddhas under scrutiny, and the pressure was tangible. At that point, it was about keeping the team morale intact, but Gowda and his teammates have found a way to shrug off that burden.

"Definitely, there was pressure earlier, as we had lapses on both the offensive and defensive fronts. However, we have shed that pressure in the last two games, and recovered our mojo to begin winning games again," he says. Momentum, after all, is fragile in PKL, and regaining it can make the difference between playoffs and an early exit. Confidence is returning, but Gowda knows the team cannot afford complacency. The wins have helped, and right now, consistency is the ultimate goal. "There is still scope for improvement. Obviously, people doubted us when we lost four games. After consecutive victories, confidence is back, and the team is focused on sustaining the momentum that could carry them to the playoffs," he said. Depth has become the Yoddhas' secret weapon. With multiple match-winners, the team doesn't rely on any one player, and Gowda is the first to acknowledge this strength.

"There are always benefits of the wealth of attacking riches we have at our disposal, because we always consult each other before and during the games. Someday Bhavani clicks, someday Guman does, and some other day someone else does...that's the advantage of having a strong squad depth. Both the coach and captain also advise us accordingly. Our pre-match analysis and training are top-notch." The next chapter of the season will unfold in Chennai, where every game will carry extra weight. With only 18 league matches, teams can't afford slip-ups, and the Yoddhas are acutely aware of this. "We are very excited about the matches in the Chennai leg. This season, we have only 18 league matches. In Chennai, the table scenario will become clearer – of who remains at the top and who qualifies for the playoffs. So, to win the forthcoming games is of utmost importance for us," Gowda said, highlighting the stakes and the hunger within the squad. This resurgence is built on a strong foundation, laid by coaches who understand the game and the players intimately. "We were placed 10th in Season 10. But coach Jasveer Singh saab spotted the right talents, retained the correct players, and took them to the semi-finals. Both he and Upendra Malik saab lay a special focus on preparing as per the games, giving the right inputs during the match, and maintaining a lively atmosphere that keeps everyone in the right spirits," he recalls.

Pecco denies Mir in epic Motegi pole battle

Tokyo, Sept 27 (UNI) : The trials and tribulations of Barcelona and Misano now seem like distant memories for Francesco Bagnaia (Ducati Lenovo Team) as the double MotoGP™ World Champion snatched pole position at the Motul Grand Prix of Japan, continuing a weekend that has seen him back to his best. Joan Mir (Honda HRC Castrol) put in a stunner to run the #63 close in the battle for pole too, right in contention, but forced to settle for second. Still, that equals his best ever qualifying in MotoGP. Marc Marquez (Ducati Lenovo Team), meanwhile, completes the front row at Motegi as he faces down Championship points on Sunday.

Q1 was full of big names; Alex Marquez (BK8 Gresini Racing MotoGP), Franco Morbidelli (Pertamina Enduro VR46 Racing Team), home-hero Ai Ogura (Trackhouse MotoGP Team) and reigning World Champion Jorge Martin (Aprilia Racing) all aiming to graduate to Q2. Ogura and Morbidelli were the two provisionally going through with five minutes to go, with Alex Marquez only third.

Having gone into P2, Fermin Aldeguer (BK8 Gresini Racing MotoGP) then crashed at Turn 5 and paid the price as teammate Alex Marquez moved into the top two to nab that spot. Morbidelli hauled himself back into P1 ahead of an impressive charge from Ogura, before Alex Marquez had the final say, taking P2 before more yellow flags came out. Brad Binder (Red Bull KTM Factory Racing) had a fast one at Turn 12 and Alex Rins (Monster Energy Yamaha MotoGP) went down at Turn 10, halting Ogura and Martin's Q2 charge, leaving them 13th and 17th respectively, as Morbidelli and Alex Marquez headed to the pole battle. As Q2 got underway, there was instant drama for Pedro Acosta (Red Bull KTM Factory Racing), who pulled back into the pits after his out-lap with a technical issue. As everyone's first runs were coming to a close, they all chased Pecco who, having been fastest on Friday, was leading teammate Marquez and Fabio Quartararo (Monster Energy Yamaha MotoGP). With the final run on the horizon though, there was plenty of time for surprises. In the last burst of track action, a flurry of red sectors and fast lap times. Morbidelli was the first to take provisional pole before Marc Marquez snatched it away, but the surprise was Mir, who rocketed up to P1. But a career first MotoGP pole for the #36 was just usurped with less than 30 seconds on the clock as Bagnaia completed his flying lap and snatched top spot. At the chequered flag, it was the first pole for the #63 since Brno and just his second of the 2025 season, ahead of Mir who equals his career-best grid slot of P2 and his best-ever for Honda.
